Lamber Business of Seattle-The "Civilized" Chinooks-Polite Woodcutters. The Worm That Bores and Is Not a Worm, but a Mollusk and a Teredo.

Copyright by Edgar W. Nye,

One of the bright pictures of the furure chemisted by the people of Seattle is that of a fine navy yard at Lake Washington, a beautiful sheet of water twenty-six iniles ong and averaging four mi es in winth. It aiso has a good and sufficient depth for the anchorage of the Great Lastern anywhere through its entire ength.

There is already a log canal connecting it wit the and throught nion lake, and it wou a not be a big job to make a saip canal, as the lake is but a few leep

STUDYING THE TEREDO.

Egaer than Puget sound and the ground easily worked without plasting. The chief advantage of a fresh water harbor for ships, of course, is that the teredo or ship worm the pest of all warm salt waters and especially of Puget sound, would be eliminated. Large bills for nava vermituge would thus be rendered unnecessary and ironclads especially won a become less norons.

The teredo is one of a genus of acrephalons, testaceons mollusis that bore and penetrate the bottoms of ships and other submersed wood. The ship worm belongs to a family of cone aferous or tame i pranchiates. They are not, strictly speaking, worms at all, as they have the true moduscan organization and the elongation of the body is simply the to the excessive protraction backward of the siphonal tubes, which time give us a ong waisted moonst, vulgarly called a worm. The family includes the Teredo, the Nansitora, the Enphess, the Calobates, The Xylotrya, the Uperotus and the Lyrocus, all of whom are highly connected. ! On entering the navy the Gereco family's motto is "Ever on ward and apward," and though at times he is a hore, the teredo retains his hold on society like a retired muzi-ist who has married well

The Tere o Nava is, as we call him in scientific circles, coes his boring and destructive work by means of the armature of the valves already described, and yet Professor 2. Percival Wright very trut ifully says that the slip worm is no armature at this business.

The sexes of the Teredo family are unequally divised, there being about twenty males to one female. The latter ays its eggs in the mont is of time and duly, in large orantones. Sea sickness never interferes with her plans.

To remove ship worms bathe the logfom of the same every morning in not borax water, riuse thoroughly in tepic, Custilled water, wide cry with a coarse crash tower, and then smear thoroughly with creosote oil. This should be kept up for at least a fortnight, after which it will be found that the worms are so studened that they may be readily removed from their holes by means of a

The front driver is moved by means of a walking beam extending from the second criver. On each side of the rows of pinions on each drum is a large corrugated surface on which operates the heavy steam brake so that the train may be brought to a stand-still on the steepest grades. In adcition to his, the engine is fitted with hand prazes and also has a device by which the cylinders act as brakes. The cylinders, are seventeen indies in ciameter, with twenty inch stroke and are made unusua, y strong and leavy.

A number of gracers are now at work fixing a grade from the station of he Pixe's Pear road to the top of the Midand trestle in Manitou to bring cown the cars and engines as fast as they arrive.
